Institute Colloquium: Shohini Ghose (Wilfrid Laurier University)

Shohini Ghose

Wilfrid Laurier University

Host: PDA

Quantum physics has already transformed society by enabling our current computing technologies as well as our communications systems and the internet. The next quantum revolution may lead to game-changing quantum computers and a quantum internet. This presentation discusses what drives the power of quantum computing and communication, what is the current status of the technology, and how it could impact communications, security, health, finance, climate and more.
