TWIST Talk: Reflection on my journey from Academia to industry

Priyanka Dutta Passecker

Host: Bernhard Petermeier

I often reflect back on my journey from Academia to industry to starting my own company. I will speak about whether it is about taking path less travelled and keep going to follow your dream. As a female founder and entrepreneur, it remains important to me to continue shatter glass ceilings and continue to support uplift innovation-driven mindset within researchers to translate innovation to transform patients' lives. I will speak about how the private venture-funded companies valued at $1 billion and up (at least 957), an estimated 11.4 percent have a female founder or co-founder and how we can change the paradigm by offering early tools to researcher to be ready for industry. I will share my vision for Healiva where I mobilized a core team of seasoned experts in wound care and cell therapy that helped to build a cell therapy, medical device and enzyme technology focused start up in Lugano, Switzerland. Healiva® aims to provide a paradigm shift in wound care by bringing one of the broadest, end-to-end, personalized chronic wound care portfolios to millions of patients with unmet chronic wound needs.
